

Important People in Genealogy: Lisa Alzo

Lisa A. Alzo with a M.F.A. degree is a freelance writer, instructor, and internationally recognized lecturer, specializing in Slovak/Eastern European genealogical research, writing your family history, and using the Internet to trace female and immigrant ancestors. If any of you need research with Slovak and Eastern European genealogy, Lisa is the definitely the right person. How she became a genealogist is quite a story in and of itself which may inspire many us who need to jump-start their motivation at

- Lisa Alzo has been contributing to her publications since her first article, Silent Voices, with advice on how to tell the stories of your female immigrant ancestors, appeared in our September/October 2004 issue of Family Chronicle. Since then, she has continued as a regular author on our other magazines including Internet Genealogy, Your Genealogy Today (formerly Family Chronicle), and the former Discovering Family History (2008-2010). Lisa has written extensively on Eastern European research, female ancestors, family history writing, and Immersion Genealogy, a term Lisa coined to better describe the growing genealogy tourism aspect of family history, and she contributes reviews on apps and software for writing applications, and much more. In 2013, while writing a number of articles of her own, Lisa also worked with other authors to compile our successful Tracing Your Eastern European Ancestors special issue, and contributed to our 2015 edition of Tracing Your Female Ancestors Volume II. She is also a successful speaker, blogger and genealogy educator.

Whenever the opportunity comes up to attend her presentation at local family history conference, don't hesitate to attend as she has presented extensively in the USA and Canada. Here are two free webinars you could also attend with topics should interest most of us. I have attended her presentations many times at RootsTech Conferences.
