

How to Improve Upon Your Asian Family History Research Needs?

There are several places in The Family History Guide where you can find resources for doing Asian family history research. In their Countries menu, the Ethnic section leads to an Asian research page. Separate Country pages are available for China, India, Indonesia, Japan, Pacific Islands, Philippines, and South Korea. There is also an Asia Miscellaneous page that has Choices for 45 smaller countries and islands. (See All Tips)

The fastest way search for Asian family history in FamilyHistory.org which now has 8 Billion Names which are now searchable at FamilySearch.org. Suggest you start searching for your ancestors by individual countries in their Help Center at: <https://www.familysearch.org/help/helpcenter/>. For those of you who need assistance with their Asian language skills, FamilySearch.org can used to identify particular languages needs. Beyond the sheer numbers of records on-line, please view this link: How do I change the language in FamilySearch? This can be useful with the many languages available in FamilySearch. For examples, there are options available for the Nepal Languages. The Indo-Aryan languages which are related to Sanskrit, much as modern European languages are related to Latin. To find out more about South Asian languages, visit the South Asian Linguistics website maintained by Dr. John Peterson. We Are Living in a Global World Well Connected by Technology

This Facebook group also covers many of the Asian countries in its table of contents at <http://www.foothills-family-history.org>. See below for the 60+ countries already compiled for your convenience. Any special requests needed? I will take V.I.P. requests from our faithful followers. Lily, our faithful Facebook group follower living in mainland China who is not a member of our Church has had significant success in tracing her ancestors back to the late 1400's. Surprisingly, individual villages in China can have amazing records going back hundreds of years, you can read about her successes in my very next Facebook group posting.

In my next posting of this Facebook group, I will share a testimonial story of an incredible success story of a Chinese citizen with her family history that I have been personally involved with to give each of you hope and motivation that the Lord is truly in charge of this world regardless of the status of today's coronavirus pandemic.
